ALEXANDRIA, VA., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1876. MEDICINES.

ALEXA.GAZETTE & VIRGINIA ADVERTISER PUBLISHED DAILY BY EDGAR SNOWDEN. SAZETTE BUILDING, NO. 70 PRINCE STREET

A United South.

Senator Bayard, in his speech to the New Jersey democratic convention on Tuesday,

Pause a moment with me, and see how false is the suggestion that there is a unity of any kind or on any subject among the Southern States that can be in any degree a source of danger of the safety, honor or welfare of the Northern States or the common government of all. What does the South seek which endangers the North? Is it as in 1861 a separate governmental existence? The doctrine of secession died in April, 1865, and not even the wildest credulity has imagined that its pale ghost has ever or will ever revisit its former abodes on earth. Is it the institution of negro slavery? Who so deaf as not to hear all over the South from every white man, woman and child but one increasing voice of thanks that the day of slavery has passed never to return? No intelligent man would suppose it humanly possible to restore a system of labor so condemned even, by its former friends. Is it as in 1834 a threat of nullification of unjust or unequal tarifi or excise laws? The loud outery against the tree admission of Hawiian rice and sugar, which arose in the Carolinas and Louisiana at the last session of Congress, would satisfy us (and perhaps, not pleasantly) that "protection" has charms for class interests elsewhere than in Pennsylvania. Is it the currency and banking question? Where shall sounder views he found than in States still retuining the original democratic views that the constitution gave to Congress the power to "coin money" and regulate the value thereof, but never to substitate a naked credit without intrinsic value for that which was not only of value but in itself a standard of all other values? No clearer ex-ponents of such views can be found than abound in the Southern States. Upon what question, what issue, then, is "the South a unit" which should compel the Northern States to array themselves in solid opposition? The South is a unit for retorm, for honest alministration, for equal laws, for upholding every guarantee of the constitution to the every State and every citizen of every State. The South is a unit against a Federal administration which has organized government in those States so that it is but another name for robbery, which has placed and kept in official power a class os rulers fatal to peace, prosperity and decent government. The Southern States need peace and honest rule; they need economy and henesty in their rulers to enable them to build anew the fabric of their fortunes. This is all they ask, and for this they are a unit. I ask any honest man who hears me, when has the republican administration at Washington rebuked or punished a rogue in the South of its own party? What class of men have found and kept the Presidential car? Was it the taxpayers of South Carolina who, with such men as Governors Aiken and Manning and Porter and Simons at their head, waited with humble petitions for relief at the Executive foctstool at Washington, only to be rebuffed and insulted at the suggestions of such men as Patterson and Whittemore? Is it not such men as Casey and Kellogg, and Pinchback and Packard, and Durrell and Billings, who alone find favor in the ear of this Dionysius, whose cars lie only in his feet, and who neither hears nor heeds a voice from any but a degraded

The South is a unit for just such objects as will benefit and bless the North as well as the South. She has no interest inconsistent with the interests of the North. She has no ambition to gratify but will redound to Northern as well as Southern reputation. For richer or for poorer, for better and for worse, her fate is linked to that of the Northern States, and the winds of fortune visit both together.

A Southern Sailor Abroad.

The following letter to a gentleman in Baltimore is of interest to the writer's many friends. Captain Morris is a native of Georgia, and was an officer of the Federal and Confederate

YACHT CZARINA, LONDON.—Here I am, fighting captain of this craft, which is as pretty a schooner as you would wish to look at, two hundred and seventy-five tuns, and belonging to the Baroness M. de Rothschild, a widow and a great invalid, so much so that she has to be taken from the cabin to the deck saloon in a lift, which has been arranged for the purpose. The deck cabin is built between the masts, and I do not think it interferes at all

Well, to spin my yarn as to my being here: The baroness has had one of the regular English yacht captains, and he did not treat her well at all-went on badly on board, with a frightful wasting of everything. You know the captain, mates, stewards and cook all mess together forward in an English yacht. She was advised by her friends to change all this, and to get some retired navy officer to take command and give him full charge, with a berth in the after eabin with herself, the doctor and her

Dr. Hillen is her principal doctor on shore, and he is a triend of mine, and suggested that I should take the place at a salary of £1 10s. a day and all my expenses paid, which I consented to, and he wrote about it, and got in answer a note which the Baroness had received from Admiral Paget, recommending a naval commander who would go for £300 a year. As I was anxious to increase my income, I said I would go for £1 a day—£365 a year—while in English waters, and 30 shillings a day if we went to the Mediterranean, which we are to do

The baroness asked me to come and spend a week on board to see how I would like it-a Police way of putting it-to see how she would ke me-which I did, and it ended in her ofleting me the command for the summer cruise, and longer it we both wished, after I had had an interview with Admiral Lord John Hey, who is a great friend, and had made her promise not to make an appointment before he saw the person. The baroness is building a new yacht of 570 tuns, to be a three masted schooner, with foretopsail and top-gallantsail. She cannot stand the ribration of an engine, and so will not have steam. This boat cost £10,000, and the builder is to take her back for £8,000 when the new one is done. The new one is to cost £18,000, to be taken back at the end of two years for £12,000. We are to go down the river tohorrow and go toward Dover, then over to Calais and along the French cost to Trouville, always putting in somewhere at night, and while we are in the English Channel I have suppliated to always have a channel pilot on board, so that we may always be able to make a por in the evening when she wishes it.

We have two mates, fifteen men, and a raft or some friends. I find it will be my hardest tion. that are the discourse of the outrageous robberies sep 22
